Recycling changes coming

Bethel, Newry and Hanover recycling will all be done at Route 2 site, in hopes of cutting costs and contamination

By MICHAEL DANIELS
With the cost of disposing of solid waste now accounting for 11 percent — and counting — of Bethel's municipal budget, town selectmen are in the market for some new and better ways to do things.

In FY 2000, Bethel spent just over $200,000 to dispose of its solid waste, out of a total municipal budget of $1,985,420.

No one seriously expects that this hefty bite out of the local tax dollar is going to be significantly reduced any time soon. But selectmen here, like their counterparts across the state and beyond, are exploring ways to at least contain its growth.

There are some long-term options for doing this, the most often mentioned being a so-called "pay-per-bag" system, in which residents pay directly in proportion to amount of waste they generate.

But pay-per-bag has traditionally met strong opposition in Bethel, so for the moment the selectmen are focusing instead on a handful of short-term fixes, including moving the transfer station, securing a new contract with the town's solid-waste hauler, and formalizing a tri-town agreement that would share the burden among Bethel, Newry and Hanover.

Recycling bins to move
For many years Bethel residents have enjoyed the convenience of unsupervised 24/7 recycling availability, but they have not responded to that benefit by disciplining themselves to put the right things — and only the right things — in the individual recycling containers.

As a result, as of Nov. 21, 24/7 will be a thing of the past. The Bethel recycling bins will be moved to the transfer station on Route 2, where they will be accessible only 13 hours a week. (See notice, page 20, for details.)

The move was one of a number of recommendations made in February by the town's Solid Waste and Recycling Advisory Committee.

Mt. Abram sold for $325,000

Mt. Abram ski resort in Locke Mills was sold at auction Wednesday afternoon for $325,000. The name of the successful bidder and the nature of their plans for the ski area were not known as of The Citizen's press time. The auctioneer, however, described the winning bidder as "a skier with a long family history of skiing Mt. Abram." Following two earlier foreclosures, in 1993 and 1998, the ski area had sold for, respectively $700,000 and $435,000. The wheel here pulled customers up Mt. Abram's short-lived snow-tubing park. New program turns old cartridges into high-tech tools for schools

By ALISON ALOISIO

Next time your computer printer cartridge runs out of ink, several Bethel-area organizations are hoping you won't just toss it in the trash. Sunday River Ski Resort, the Bethel Area Chamber of Commerce and SAD44 are teaming up to establish what they hope will be a "massive" cartridge recycling program, according to Emily Beers of the chamber. The effort can earn new computer equipment for schools in the district.

Mari Grover, a project manager with Sunday River, read in News-week magazine about FundingFactory.com, an Internet company that collects laser and inkjet cartridges for recycling. The company awards points for the cartridges. The points in turn can be put toward new equipment.

The cartridges may be refilled or disassembled and melted down for recycling, depending on the route they take. Disadvantaged people are hired to disassemble the cartridges.

Grover and Marvin Collins, vice president of operations at Sunday River, put the word out within the company by e-mail about a month ago. Since then, they've collected about two dozen, and plan an organized effort to gather more.

Collins also contacted Emily Beers at the chamber to ask if that organization could act as a conduit between SAD44 and area businesses — to organize a more widespread program.

Word has now gone out by e-mail to about 250 chamber members, and drop-off points have been established throughout the area. Bethel

The race, if not the candidates, turned out younger voters

By ALISON ALOISIO

Today's young adults are, according to some reports, one of the most politically apathetic generations in a long time. One might question that, however, after the local turnout in last week's election.

There is admittedly nothing scientific about the numbers, but consider these facts:

In Greenwood, about 20 of 35 voters registering last Tuesday were first-time voters.

In Bethel, 53 out of 141 voters registering were 25 or under.

In Newry, eight of 17 new registrants were under 25.

In Woodstock, 19 of 60 registering were 25 or younger.

It would logically be expected that a significant percentage of any newly-registering voters would include young, first-time voters. But, said Vern Maxfield, Woodstock town manager, "there were definitely more (young voters registering) than in 1996."

The number of young voters also caught the attention of Loretta Berry, deputy town clerk in Newry. In addition to those registering that day, she said, about half of the town's college students voted by absentee ballot.

What do the under-25s have to say about why they voted in this election, the results, and their gen-

Musty stickers recall: 'Maine for Muskie'

By ALISON ALOISIO

Would the 1972 presidential election have been as close as the current one if Edmund Muskie had been the Democratic nominee?

That question may be as difficult to answer as: How confusing was the Palm Beach ballot? How many valid votes are there in Florida?

In any case, the political rhetoric of this election season has some local residents casting a nostalgic look back at the days of Muskie's candidacy. So much so, in fact, that a few "Maine for Muskie" bumper stickers can be seen riding around Bethel.

About a month ago, someone cleaning out a family home brought about 30 stickers to Sally Taylor, owner of Playhouse Antiques. Taylor and her husband, Dick, promptly put one on each of their vehicles.

"People have been waving and honking," said Sally. "They ask, 'Is that an original or did you just have it printed?'"

George Nickerson of Bethel spotted the sticker on her bumper and thought, "Wow, it would be neat to have one of those," he said.

Nickerson, who graduated from Gould Academy, fondly remembers political discussion in school centering around Muskie. "I was young enough to find him fascinating," Nickerson said.

Wanting to preserve his sticker for posterity, he displayed it from inside the back window of his pickup truck. He plans to save it to put out again at strategic political times in the future. Nickerson also has a Muskie campaign pin.

Brad Clarke of Bethel was only 5

TIME OF CHOICE IN ALBANY

To the Editor:

On Oct. 15, a second meeting was held of all concerned residents of Albany Township. As in the prior meeting, a great many questions were raised and a great number of opinions were heard regarding the possible change from Albany Township to Albany Plantation. It is pretty much agreed that the best chance we have of keeping high-stakes gambling from Albany is to change over to a plantation, but the biggest objection to this move is strictly financial, which is a very legitimate concern. The people that have been looking into the matter on behalf of all the rest of us agree that our taxes would at least double, but also feel very strongly that if the Indians get in our taxes would go up anyway.

The Indians have recently stated that they do not plan to pursue their high-stakes bingo any further, and if this were the case, we would all be happy with the status quo, but considering their past record in this matter, we can hardly put our faith in their statement. If they get their bingo approved within two years, we would have a casino, which the Indians would have no part in, but would bring in a class of people which I do not believe any of us want.

Citizens of Albany, as well as some concerned citizens from outside, have spent, as of this date, over $30,000, as well as hundreds of hours working on fundraisers. If we give up now, all these efforts will have been wasted. Though there are no guarantees, we have nothing to lose but money. If high-stakes bingo, a casino with restaurants and hotels come into our territory, we will have lost a way of life.

On Dec. 15 there will be a meeting for all registered voters of Albany Township to vote on whether or not we should pursue the idea of converting to a plantation. The question is actually should we all become liable for additional expenses in order to keep the high-stakes gambling out of Albany. I personally believe that we should, but I am willing to accept the will of the majority. If we make a bad choice we will deserve whatever we get.

MORE ON MEALS ON WHEELS

To the Editor:

I traditionally do not respond to a political response to public comment, but when Sen. Ferguson claims my statements pertaining to LD 1552 (Meals on Wheels) are "false and misleading," I feel our senior citizens must be aware of the area representation in the Capital.

First, let me congratulate the senator on his election to his final term, and "kudos" to his political strategy of responding in the last issue of The Bethel Citizen prior to the Nov. 7 election, so this response will not be published until after the election.

The senator is proud to tell the public how supportive he is of the Meals on Wheels funding, but doesn't once address the need for the service to the aging "rural" population. As evident in his letter, he has constantly looked at the "budget bill." In my article, I never mentioned this point, for good reason. The issue of Meals on Wheels to the frail, needy, aging people of Maine is not about dollars and cents, it is about our aging population maintaining "quality of life" in their home environment as part of the state's commitment to "aging in place."

"Meals on Wheels funding has been increased to an adequate level," he says. I offer to the people in Senate District 24 that there are numerous elderly residents that only receive five frozen meals per week, meaning that the remote region doesn't have funding for daily meals, or social contact. This non-financial element is the reason I suggested voters sitting down and talking with candidates — conservatives have a tendency to just see the fiscal responsibility.

I, by no means, intended the senator to become so defensive, but if voters want to visualize a "strong supporter of the program," just request a "roll call" of votes on LD 1552. I cannot recognize a nay vote as supportive of the people's needs.

COYOTES MUST BE KEPT IN CHECK

To the Editor:

I, too, agree with Mr. Olson's assessment (Citizen, Nov. 2) of the coyote population in this area. I also agree that man has unbalanced the scale between natural and unnatural predation; therefore, it is up to man to control this balance when possible.

When the predator, in this case the coyote, increases to an excessive degree, the prey, in this case the whitetail deer, will ultimately decline.

It is because of our management practices that the deer herd in this area continues to grow. With an abundance of food and no natural predation, the coyote population continues to flourish. It is up to man to keep this population in check, and the only viable solution is hunting and trapping.

It may be true that to ensure a healthy herd of farm animals the sick and injured need to be culled, but to believe that a pack of coyotes pick only on the weak and injured is either extremely naive or totally ignorant of the ways of nature.

Left unchecked, the coyote population will have significant impact on the fawn crop each spring, and they will take adult healthy deer at will, during the times of heavy snow or crust conditions in winter. Domestic animals will also suffer the consequences and people won't have to look far for someone who is missing cats or small dogs.

If one wants to find success stories of game management, they need only look around (outside) to find the state of Maine has done a tremendous job bringing the deer herd to such a point that they are actually a problem in certain parts of the state. On a national scale, the snow goose has been brought back from near extinction to a population explosion that threatens to eat itself out of its own nesting area. The list is extensive, but the most well known that even those who never venture into the wilds can recognize, is the bald eagle, brought back to a point where it is no longer on the endangered species list.

Three hundred years ago, the whitetail deer population for this area was almost non-existent. It is only through some sound game management, which includes predator control, that the deer have reached their current levels.

I, too, am concerned about the misinformed and misguided attitudes.

CARTRIDGE RECYCLING PROGRAM

To the Editor:

Nov. 8-15 marked Maine State Recycles week, and Sunday River Ski Resort and the Bethel Area Chamber of Commerce have teamed up with SAD44 to initiate participation in a massive printer-and-toner-cartridge-recycling program in the Bethel area.

In 1998, FundingFactory.com launched what is known as the Educational Technology and Conservation Exchange Program (ETCEP). The program encourages schools to collect empty laser and inkjet cartridges along with fax, plotter, and copier toner cartridges. The cartridges are given certain point values and the points that are earned may then be exchanged for free classroom technology products.

ETCEP provides the appropriate containers (postage paid) in which to return the cartridges to the company. Since 1997 FundingFactory.com has outsourced the labor required for building cartridge collection kits and disassembling returned cartridges to both mentally and physically challenged workers, people on work release programs, and welfare rolls.

This is a continuous program that everyone can actively participate in and be very proud of. It's easy, it's free, and it is a win-win situation for everyone involved.

I invite anyone interested in more information to look up their web site at www.fundingfactory.com/etcep/visitorhome.asp, or contact me at 824-2282, or Mari Grover and Marvin Collins at 824-3000.

THANKS FOR THE CARTRIDGE PROGRAM

To the Editor:

Recently Marvin Collins, vice president of operations at Sunday River, and Emily Beers from the Bethel Area Chamber of Commerce, approached me about our District's participation in an ink cartridge recycling program. The essence of the program is used ink cartridges are collected, sent by our students to a recycling firm, and in return the District receives credit for the purchase of technology related items.

Obviously I was very pleased and excited about this program and readily agreed to participate. Aside from the subsidiary benefit of keeping used cartridges out of our landfills, the program helps in the purchase of much needed items and involves some of our students in a very worthwhile activity.

I urge our residents to also participate. This can be done by dropping off used cartridges at any school, the transportation garage, Bethel Rite Aid, Key Bank, the Chamber office, Andover Automotive, and Maine Line products in Locke Mills. Or, simply have a student bring the cartridges to school.

Many thanks to Marvin and his staff for discovering this program and also to Emily for involving the Chamber. This is a wonderful example of community resources and the school system jointly working for the benefit of our students.

INTEREST IN MS SELF-HELP GROUP?

To the Editor:

Is anyone interested in being part of a multiple sclerosis self-help group that would meet in the Bethel area? This group would provide a confidential forum for people with MS, their families and friends to discuss issues relating to MS. Anyone interested is asked to contact Amy Hamilton at the Maine Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society at (800) 639-1330. The National MS Society's mission is to end the devastating effects of MS.

THANKS FOR THE SUPPORT

To the Editor:

I want to take this opportunity to thank the hundreds of voters that I have met over the course of this election season. I want to thank them for opening their homes to me, for allowing me the opportunity to get to know them, their issues and concerns.

Being part of our election process, as a candidate, has been a great experience for me personally, and I want everyone to know that I truly appreciate all of their support and hard work these past several months. The good wishes and words of encouragement will be remembered for a very long time.

I feel blessed to have met so many people that not only believe in, but live by, such strong moral values and that are such great role models for our various communities. Their strong faith in the Lord, and the way that they live their lives is a wonderful example for all of us to follow.

Police log

Saturday, Nov. 11

At 4:15 a.m. police received a complaint of a party on Vernon Street. Police met with the renter of the home. While speaking with him the officer noticed marijuana on the kitchen table. When asked in what they had been smoking the marijuana, the subject produced a water bong. Gregory Morin, 18, was charged with possession of marijuana and possession of paraphernalia.

At 5:45 p.m. police observed a vehicle operating erratically. The officer stopped it and smelled an odor of intoxicating liquor. The subject admitted to drinking. He was given field sobriety tests, and did not pass. He was then taken to the Police Department for a test. Graham P. Thornton was summonsed for OUI and released.

Monday, Nov. 13

At 11:30 p.m. police received a report of a party in West Bethel with underage subjects. The renter, Angie J. Farrar, 20, was charged with furnishing a place for minors to consume liquor.

This report highlights points of interest from the Bethel Police Department log. It lists all cases of adults being summonsed or arrested, but does not include all reports of other police activity. To reach the Bethel Police Department, call 911 in emergency situations, 824-3437 in non-emergencies.

Recycling

tee. It is being made because of contamination in the bins at the current recycling location, the Bethel Airport.

Most people use the facility responsibly, said Town Manager Scott Cole, "but even a small error rate creates unacceptable contamination."

That contamination (the wrong materials mixed in with the various types of recyclables) has led to numerous loads being rejected, Cole said, "and that defeats the whole purpose of recycling."

And it costs the town more money, something town officials hope to save by moving the recycling bins to a location where their use can be supervised.

The downside of the move, all appear to agree, is that the less convenient location and hours are almost certain to reduce the volume of materials being recycled, with more materials going instead into the unsorted household waste bins. "It's a terrible trade-off, a bad deal either way," Cole said.

Going interlocal

Officials in Bethel, Newry and Hanover hope their new interlocal agreement on solid waste will be a better deal.

The arrangement, which is expected to be formalized next week, should clean up — procedurally as well as physically — the solid waste situation in the three towns. It will consolidate recycling and the disposal of household waste behind a single, attended gate, at the site of the old Bethel landfill.

The agreement calls for the three towns to share the cost of moving the current Bethel transfer station to the new site, the cost of site work for the move, and then the cost of operating the facility.

The effect of the new agreement will be felt most strongly in Newry, where the town residents have been disposing of their household waste in dumpsters scattered about the town.

Those dumpsters, and the recycling centers at the town's two fire stations, have had serious contamination problems. Some residents have complained about inappropriate materials, such as construction debris and furniture, being left outside the dumpsters. But there is a more serious problem at the recycling centers, where recyclables are often left unsorted, and other, inappropriate materials — including on at least two occasions medical waste — have been left.

In a letter earlier this month, urging the Bethel selectmen to conclude the new agreement, Newry administrative assistant Sylvia Gray described the situation. "The town of Newry is operating illegal transfer stations at this time, and the situation only gets worse each week. People leave toilets, tires, washers, dryers, batteries — you name it, they leave it. We then have to find someone to haul this trash to the Bethel transfer station, which I might add is not an easy thing to do."

Hanover residents, by virtue of an existing agreement with Bethel, have long been hauling their household waste to the Bethel facility, but their own in-town recycling program has also been plagued by contamination problems, according to Selectman Bruce Powell.

The new, consolidated facility is expected to be ready in the spring. Cole said, but once the agreement among the three towns is signed, residents of Newry and Hanover can immediately begin using the current Bethel transfer station for all their household waste and recyclables.

Finally a hauling contract

For well over a year, Bethel has been operating without a written contract with its solid waste hauler, D & E Sanitation.

The cost of having the town's solid waste picked up, hauled to a landfill and dumped (or "tipped") there accounts for nearly three-quarters of Bethel's solid-waste-disposal costs.

Over the period in which there has been no written contract, D & E has kept its rates steady, but selectmen want to lock in rates, in order to give the town some certainty about that key element in its solid-waste budget.

Cole said Monday a two-year agreement with D & E is nearly ready to be signed.

He said the contract rate was not yet available, but no significant increase was expected.

The agreement with D & E was reached privately, and at the most recent selectmen's meeting Al Barth expressed concern that such a large contract was being negotiated without competitive bidding.

However, the board elected to forego competitive bidding, in view of the apparent lack of other qualified haulers, and because of the town's long and positive experience with the company.

Another airport option?

BETHEL—Town officials have entered new negotiations with two landowners, exploring a new possibility for allowing the $2.4-million Bethel airport expansion project to go forward, according to Town Manager Scott Cole. In order for the airport project to proceed, the town must relocate a dirt road away from a planned runway expansion. But voters last week turned down a proposal to purchase by eminent domain the necessary easement on property owned by Richard and Mary Valentine. At the time that appeared to be the only option for relocating the road, but new discussions have focused on another, privately owned dirt logging road on the properties of Richard Tibbetts and Dale Verrill. Cole said he hopes to have an answer on the new options in a few days.

Albany meeting time changed

ALBANY—An informational meeting on the implications of organizing as a township will take place Sunday, Nov. 19 at 1 p.m. at the Albany Grange (downstairs). Panelists will include Doreen Sheive, fiscal administrator of the unorganized territories; Robert Doiron, property tax supervisor of the unorganized territories; Richard Moreau, superintendent of schools for the unorganized territories; John Williams, director of the Land Use Regulation Commission; and James Carey, Oxford County Commissioner.

Cup goes to Bear River

NEWRY—The first annual Newry Cup competition took place Saturday evening at the Bear River Grange. Following a community supper, moderator Brooks Morton conducted a trivia contest based on Newry history. Bear River residents were triumphant over their Sunday River counterparts by a score of 13-7. The scores were tabulated by Wendy Haiscom of Bear River, who turned down demands from Sunday River sore losers for a recount. The cup — formerly a chamber pot — was donated by Bill and Sylvia Wight. It is now on display at the Town Office.

Andover has new librarian

ANDOVER—Selectmen last week unanimously approved the hiring of Janet Farrington as the new librarian at the Andover Public Library. She replaces Christine Mulvaney, who resigned Sept. 18 after months of dispute with the Library Board of Trustees and selectmen. Farrington, who lives in Andover, was one of four finalists for the job. She will be paid $6.77 an hour for a 20-hour week.

THETFORD, Vt.—Anna Willard of Telstar High School placed 26th out of 219 finishers at the New England Cross-Country Championships held Saturday at Thetford Academy. She was the fourth finisher from Maine, with a time of 20:29. Willard was also named to the Lewiston Sun-Journal All-State Cross-Country Team.

Public meeting on Odeon

BETHEL—A public meeting to discuss the Odeon Hall renovation project will take place Nov. 28 at 7 p.m. in the Telstar High School ITV room. The Cole Block Renovation Committee has been chartered by the town of Bethel to provide planning support for the Cole Block, in which Odeon Hall is located. The meeting will include an update on the project with presentations by architects Jim Reuter and Noel Smith and consultant John Cleveland. They will present their findings regarding the proposed renovation project, an accessibility concept, and cost estimates associated with its implementation.

Meeting on Morse Road project

GREENWOOD—The Greenwood Planning Board will meet Nov. 20 from 6:30 to 7 p.m. for the sole purpose of re-reviewing a permit application for construction on a lot on the Morse Road.

Get breakfast and a poinsettia

BETHEL—The Bethel Rotary Club's Country Breakfast will take place Sunday, Nov. 26 from 7:30-11:30 a.m. at the Ordway Dining Hall at Gould Academy. The charge to adults is $5 and for children under 12 $2.50. Proceeds benefit the club's scholarships and international projects. Poinsettia plants will be on sale at the breakfast, as well as through Wild River Realty (824-4500) and from Rotary members. Proceeds from the plant sale will go toward a project to provide a school in Kenya with a generator.

Greenwells at D.C. groundbreaking

BETHEL—Jerry Greenwell of Bethel, vice chairman of the American Legion National Legislative Council, attended the ground breaking ceremony for the National World War II Memorial Nov. 11 in Washington, D.C. He was accompanied by his wife, Jeri, who is vice chairman of the National Constitution and Bylaws Council. As part of the trip the Greenwells also spent time on the presidential yacht "Sequoia."

Friends TMS/THS meeting changed

BETHEL—The Nov. 16 meeting of the Friends of TMS/THS has been changed to 4 p.m. at the Telstar library. There will be a special presentation by Dr. Denise Bartello on the Accelerated Reader Program, currently in use at TMS. Pizza and sandwiches will be served after the meeting. The THS meeting will follow at approximately 5:30 p.m. Anyone wishing to donate holiday food for local food pantries is asked to bring the items to the meeting.

Turkey Tuesday

LOCKE MILLS—The 10th annual Turkey Tuesday meal will take place Nov. 21 at the Locke Mills Legion Hall, beginning at 6 p.m. Participants are asked to bring a dish or beverage to share, along with plates and utensils. The event benefits the Bethel food bank, and donations of canned food or money are requested. (RSVP 824-3754)

It's fruit order time again

RUMFORD POINT—The congregation of the Rumford Point Church is once again taking orders for fruit. Navel oranges are available for $10.50 a half box and $19.50 a whole box. Grapefruit is priced at $9.50 and $17.50. Orders must be placed by Saturday, Dec. 2, for anticipated pickup on Tuesday, Dec. 12. The pickup point will again be the Rumford Point parsonage on the corner of Route 2 and Jed Martin Road between the hours of 3 and 6 p.m. on Dec. 12. To place an order, please contact Barbara at 364-7604.

Ski patrollers have contract

PARK CITY, Utah—Ski patrollers at The Canyons Resort unanimously ratified a new contract last week after becoming members of a union. An overwhelming majority of patrollers voted to unionize April 13. They won equipment allowances, health benefits, sick leave and pay increases for those with years of experience, according to a union representative. There were no increases for rookie patrollers. Phillip Kelley of the Ohio-based American Maritime Officers Union said the contract will provide continuity and experience on the mountain. Patroller Dave Reynolds declined to identify specific problems with management that prompted the union drive, citing a company policy that makes bad-mouthing The Canyons a firing offense. The Canyons president, Blaise Carrig, could not be reached for comment. Patrollers at another American Skiing Co. resort, Steamboat Springs, also voted to unionize with AMO, while patrollers at the Heavenly resort rejected representation by the Teamsters Union.

From the Bethel Police Log:

The wrong "kind" of help

At 12:34 a.m. on Nov. 7 police observed a vehicle operating erratically on Vernon Street. It was found the driver's license was suspended. Peter J. Callery, 41, of Farmington was arrested. He then began wheeling and appeared as if he would pass out. The officer asked if he was all right, and the subject replied he didn't want help "from our kind." Rescue was called, but the subject was rude to them and refused treatment. He was then taken to the Oxford County Jail.

Thursday, Nov. 9

At 9:09 p.m. police responded to a domestic disturbance on Mason Street. The officer took information from the victim that indicated an assault had taken place. Lindy Lee Latham, 35, of Bethel was located and arrested for assault. He was taken to the Oxford County Jail.

At 1:30 p.m. a subject at Telstar High School was found to be in possession of a small baggie of marijuana. The subject, a juvenile, admitted to ownership and was issued a summons.

Friday, Nov. 10

At 1:15 a.m. subjects were stopped on Route 2. It was found the driver did not have a license. The passenger said she knew he did not have one but she let him drive because she was tired. The driver, a juvenile, was issued a summons for operating without a license. The passenger, Venessa E. Reese, 18, of Harrison was given a summons for permitting unlawful use.

Young voters

eration's role in politics?

Mary Russo of Bethel, 18, is a senior at Telstar High School. She followed the election issues casually, and was ambivalent about whether or not to vote.

"She thinks some of her generation 'don't take it seriously,' she said. 'They think it's not going to help.'"

But as the election got closer, her own attitude changed. The presidential race "got closer and closer," said Russo. "My friends said, 'We can't vote (because of their age). You have to.'"

Russo voted for Al Gore for president. Her reason, she said, stemmed largely from an aversion to George W. Bush that she can't put her finger on. "I'm not sure why I don't like Bush," she said.

The election results, she said, have since proven to her that "every vote counts. You never know."

At Telstar, social studies teacher Rod Abbott has followed presidential elections for years, holding mock elections at school just prior to the real election.

"The interest in this election has been greater than most years," he said. "I have heard students discussing the results all over the school, from the library to the cafeteria. Students in my classes, especially Public Issues, have followed the election closely and continue to ask about it even though the new term has switched to 'Manifest Destiny.'"

There has also been keen interest at Gould Academy, according to local students Patrick Donovan and Angus Graham, who voted for the first time last Tuesday.

"This whole election has had me going for the last few days," said Donovan, who has several friends who also took an interest and voted.

He said he had followed the issues all along, and planned to vote regardless of the closeness of the race. "I felt that I should use my right and vote how I felt," he said.

The issues of gun control and health care led him to vote for Gore, he said.

And what does he think of the result?

"The tightness of this race has to have everybody feeling that their vote meant something towards the party they were voting for," he said. "It was a good feeling knowing that my one vote in Bethel, Maine helped out Gore in winning the popular vote. That may not mean much because of the electoral college. However, that may change because of this election — we'll see."

Like Donovan, Graham said he had planned to vote all along, and cast his ballot for Gore.

"I just felt there were a few big issues that Gore represented better than Bush," he said. "Neither Gore nor Bush stood out in my mind as an amazingly strong candidate, but Gore said fewer things that I did not like than Bush did."

Some students were surprised at how complicated the referendum questions could be, he said.

In a mock election held at the school, Gore received seven "electoral votes" to Ralph Nader's one.

Issues important to Graham included abortion and health care. He also paid attention, he said, to how the candidates presented themselves.

Gould history teacher Brad Clarke took a vanload of 18-year-olds to vote. Many of them are in his Modern Political Ideologies class.

"The week or so before the election, we focused class discussion and research upon the ideological differences between the Democratic, Republican, Green, Libertarian, etc. parties," he said.

One student surprised her father by knowing more about the issues and candidates than he did, Clarke said.

The second-timers

Jason Berry of Bethel and Katie Billings of Woodstock are relatively seasoned voters at age 22. They both voted in the 1996 presidential election.

Berry said that although he planned to vote again this time around, "When I realized it was going to be close, I made sure I did."

He chose Bush for president because, he said, "he seemed honest and I liked that." He credits Bush for quickly owning up to his OUI charge when it appeared in the media.

Berry knows of at least one friend who had not planned on voting until the last minute, when he saw how close the election appeared to be. "We were watching it on TV at Pat's Pizza," he said, when his friend decided to cast a ballot.

Berry, a logger, also had a strong interest in voting against the forestry referendum.

Billings, like Berry, followed the issues from early on. "I felt everything was important," she said.

She believes some members of her generation do not have an ongoing interest in elections because many of the issues "don't matter to them, like social security and drug prescriptions," she said. Many do not yet have dependents or homes to support, which may also lead them to feel the issues do not yet have direct relevance to them.

Like voters of all ages, Billings was amazed at the presidential results. "To really actually see (your vote) could matter was astonishing," she said.

After this election, anyone who claims an individual vote doesn't matter, "is crazy to think that way," she said.

Cartridges

sites include Key Bank, Rite Aid, the chamber and the SAD44 bus garage. Other locations include Andover Auto and all district schools.

The organizers are also asking residents with personal computers to drop off their used cartridges. It costs nothing to participate.

In addition to printer cartridges, fax, copier and plotter cartridges will also be accepted.

Students in SAD44 will do their part for the cause. Telstar Middle School seventh-graders, as part of their community service requirement, will pack the cartridges for shipment.

"The more the kids can earn, the less the taxpayers have to pay," said Beers. Beers said the organizers have contacted other school systems that participate in the program, and found they are happy with the results.

Supt. Kent Rosberg is pleased with the local effort. Requests for cartridges will go out to parents via school newsletters, he said.

"It's good for the environment, the school system and for the people who gain employment," he said. "I'm very appreciative of the efforts of Marvin Collins, Mari Grover and the chamber staff, particularly Emily Beers."

Anyone with questions about the program may call Beers at 824-2282.

More than 275 million cartridges were thrown away last year, according to a FundingFactory estimate. The company has a yearly goal of providing $100 million in computer technology for schools nationwide.

More than cartridges

Sunday River's involvement in the effort is part of a larger recycling program now underway at the resort.

Although the mountain has tried in the past to encourage recycling among condominium owners and day skiers, there is still room for improvement, Grover said. Better signage is planned for condominium units and for the lodges, to clarify where various items, such as newspapers and bottles, may be recycled.

In addition, an effort is also underway to up the amount of recycled high-grade office paper.

Other possible future projects include recycling obsolete computer equipment, and on-property composting of food waste.

Muskie

when Muskie ran for the Democratic nomination in 1972. He now has a bumper sticker on his van.

Describing himself as a "political maven," Clarke said he identifies with and is "nostalgic for Muskie because he was a Democrat who brought a higher level of integrity and intellect to politics than the current contenders for our nation's highest political prize. As a history teacher and now a Maine resident, I feel a certain amount of affection for our 'favorite son' from Rumford."

And then there was the sticker-buyer who was just passing through town. He stopped with his wife at Taylor's shop, and snapped up a sticker, saying, "He nominated me to the U.S. Military Academy."

Taylor said she thinks the nearly 30-year-old stickers lighten the current political mood. "It's a gentle little poke at the process," she said.

For those readers too young to remember, the eventual 1972 Democratic nominee was Sen. George McGovern, who lost in a landslide to Richard Nixon. McGovern carried only the state of Massachusetts and Washington, D.C. The Democratic National Convention was held in Dade County, Fla.

(Editor's note: "Musty" in the sense of out of date or antiquated. The stickers are neither damp nor smelly.)

Bethel

by Virginia Keniston
Don Stanley and son Warren of South Portland were recent visitors of his sister, Gerry Howe. Don underwent surgery for cancer on his neck following this visit and is progressing satisfactorily. Cathy Hart of Bangor spent the weekend with Gerry Howe, Joan Davidowitz of Peabody, Mass., was a caller on Sunday afternoon.

Justin and Susan Rice of Guilford, Conn., spent the weekend at their chalet at Sunday River. Lefty and Mary Keniston joined them for dinner on Sunday.

Musa Brown recently returned home after spending a week with her daughter, Nancy Brown, in Norfolk, Va. Weekend guests were Becky Crommett of Livermore and Bob and Laurie Hickey of Mills, Mass.

Bob and Linda Howe and two sons have purchased the Ethel Ward home and have moved there from their former home on the North Road.

Bea Brown is home from the hospital and her daughter, Nancy of Italy, is staying with her.

Bud and Florine Bowden are spending the winter in Florida.

Harvey Sweetser will undergo surgery at Stephens Memorial Hospital this week.

Mary Dooen recently returned from spending some time with her daughter, Kelly, in Florida.

Charles Farrar has moved back to Bethel and is staying with his daughter, Lisa Fox, for a time before moving into the Bethel House.

The Indian summer weather has been a joy. A great time to get the yard work caught up before winter. Much construction is going on in the neighborhood. The Cameron House on Mason Street has a new garage. On Chapman Street Pinky Rinebold has had extensive renovation on her house, the former Frank Packard place. Next door, the former Bartlett house is having renovations as well.

Those who attended the Public Theatre in Lewiston this past week were fortunate to have seen "Manny's War" by Marti Andrucki, directed by Christopher Schario at Schaeffer Theatre on the Bates College campus. It was a gripping story extremely well portrayed.

Sarah Stevens' nieces, Judith

Rollins of West Paris and Kathleen Coffin of Norway, called on her recently.

Arnold and Mary McLain gave Ronald Stevens a birthday party at the Country Way on his 94th birthday recently, with 22 guests present.

Lora Butters, daughter of Tony and Kathleen Butters of Magnolia, Del., participated in a statewide competition of marching bands playing the clarinet for the Cesare Rodney High School, Camden, Del., which she attends. The school took first place, and has made this honor 16 out of 18 yearly competitions. There were nearly 200 students who performed in the C.R.H.S. band that day. Twenty-seven bands attended the event with four of them in the C.R.H.S. band category.

Adam Stevens, son of Bruce and Lottie Stevens, Bar Harbor, had a lead role in the production of "Pip-pins," presented by M.D.I. High School Theater at Mt. Desert. "Pip-pins" was based on a book written by Roger O. Hirson and directed on Broadway by Bob Fosse. The cast performed six times in two weeks at M.D.I. High School, which is well known for their theater productions. Adam, who is a senior, has been very active in theater during his high school years.

The Bethel House
by Ruth Cummings

"A cat died and went to heaven. St. Peter asked it how its life had been on earth and the cat replied pretty rough and that the folks that owned him were so poor that he had to sleep on the hard floor because they could not afford a pillow. St. Peter said we can make it better for you here and gave the cat a pillow to sleep on. Soon after that, six mice died and they also went to heaven. St. Peter asked them how their life had been on earth. They replied very rough, as their legs got so tired running from cats. St. Peter said he could fix that and gave them all roller skates. A few days later he asked the cat if he was enjoying life in heaven and the cat said that he was and he was especially enjoying the meals on wheels."

Communion was observed Sunday at the Bethel Alliance Church. Pastor Rick and Judy Webster had a special song and Judy also played the piano. Many beautiful hymns were sung and also some choruses, with Andrea Bennett, Joann Royer, Stanley Walker and Pastor Rick down front. Pastor played his guitar and Judy was at the piano. Peggy also played the flute when the hymns were sung. Pastor Rick's message for the day was "The High Calling, Part Two."

Judy Webster took Lillian Kjellman back home on Saturday. She had spent a number of days with her grandparents, Drew and Judy Webster. While she was visiting, they all came in for the paper one morning and, as usual, Lillian had a hug for me.

Drew Webster assisted on a funeral on Friday at the Andrews Funeral Home in Buckfield.

Kathy, I wish you would please give me a phone call.

Someone remarked to me the other day that they wished there was more real news in the paper. I said that so many did not want their name in the paper that it was a problem for we folks writing columns to put any news in.

I realize that prices are higher at the local Foodliner than the big stores. But I do not believe there is a store where people are any more willing to help you than down here. Many times I have needed to ask for help getting something from a high shelf. And the outside door comes to on me before I can get through it and someone is always ready and willing to help me.

'SCHOONER FARE' AT GOULD ACADEMY

"Schooner Fare, the most prominent fixture in the new folk firmament," according to the Boston Globe, will be presented in concert by the Mahoosuc Arts Council on Saturday, Nov. 18 at 7 p.m. in Bingham Auditorium at Gould Academy. Schooner Fare's Steve Romanoff, Chuck Romanoff and Tom Rowe combine their talents on six- and twelve-string guitars, banjos, electric bass and tin whistles to create distinctive vocal and instrumental arrangements with captivating harmonies, highlighted with a winning stage presence. In addition to their numerous original songs on both contemporary and traditional themes, Schooner Fare writes and performs topical songs, country ballads and maritime masterpieces that have made their name synonymous with the "Down East" style. Their work has been hailed by such folk music icons as the Kingston Trio, the Limeliters, the Chad Mitchell Trio, the Clancy Brothers, Tommy Makem and Tom Paxton. As Maine's premier musical ambassadors, Schooner Fare performs throughout the U.S. and Canada, from Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts in New York to the Back Stage in Seattle. They have enjoyed featured radio airplay and album distribution across the waters as far as Australia, Japan, the British Isles and Eastern Europe. As keepers of home folk fires, they have been transmitting their brand of grassroots spirit to audiences in the U.S. and abroad since the group's inception in 1975. Tickets for the concert are on sale at the Big Apple in Bethel and at the door on the night of the show. Adult tickets are $10 in advance and $12 at the door. Student tickets are $5. Ticket reservations can be made by calling the Mahoosuc Arts office at 824-3575.

Judy Webster worked at the polls on Election Day.

Joyce Patneude took me to Dr. Porter's on Friday for a visual field test. Joyce is a volunteer for Seniors Plus and a lovely lady. She stays right with me all the time.

Drew and Judy Webster were in Bridgton recently.

Nancy Cummings took me to the Health Center for my check up with Jan on Tuesday.

Congratulations to Eric Hanscom and Kristina Koskela on winning first and second prize at the Halloween dance with their costumes.

Drew and Judy Webster were in Fryeburg on Monday.

Sarah Stevens was the first to contact me after I was asking if anyone remembered when Joe Chapman, Arthur Farrar and Lillian Coleman were in Grafton. She said she lived there with her parents when she was a young girl and they were there then. One person said that at one time Joe lived much further back in the woods. I do not know if he was alone then or not. Maybe he had a wife at the time. Another source said at one time they lived in the Morse place at the foot of the hill before Screw Auger Falls and that at least Lill lived there and they believed she was related to the Morse family. Now I seem to recall that Arthur Farrar spent the last years of his life with a Davis family in Bethel and I would appreciate it if someone out there knows if this is so or not. My phone number is 824-2813.

"Cack" and Bea Bean took Olive Williams to New Hampshire recently to see her eye doctor.

Brian Cook and Eric were at the Bethel House on Tuesday. Brian did some maintenance work and raked some leaves and he and a lady were also checking on the system where they should be able to call us from the main entrance but have not been able to do so for ages. Eric also did some painting on B-11.

Nearly 200 persons got their flu shots at the Methodist Church on Tuesday and at the Health Center later.

Becky, Abbie and Michaela Cummings visited with me on Tuesday evening and invited me to have Thanksgiving with them.

The Christmas in the Valley Craft Fair will be held on Dec. 2 at Mountain Valley High School.

They are looking for all you good cookie cooks out there to donate your specialties for the cookie walk. Last year they sold 50 dozen cookies in only two hours and wish to break this record this year. For further information, please call Heidi at 369-0768 or Debbie at 364-7866.

There will be a Rabies Clinic held at the Andover Fire Station on Nov. 18, this Saturday. Hours are from 2 to 4 p.m. Fee is $9. You have been warned — don't forget. Registration for your dogs must be done before the end of December. This can be done at the town office during regular business hours.

There will be a Flu Shot Clinic held at the Andover Town Hall on Tuesday, Nov. 21, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. This clinic is limited to people at high risk and people over 65, due to the shortage of vaccine. You can contact the Bethel Family Health Center to find out when the rest of the flu shots will be available.

More people to add to the Stinson family "thank you" list: Michael Brown for walking Rocky; Sandra Clements for the wonderful baked beans; the Calvary Church for the great fruit basket; and for the cards and letters that are still arriving. All this caring means so much to my mother and father. Thanks again.

Speaking of thanks, it doesn't seem possible that Thanksgiving's just around the corner and the "dreaded holiday season" is almost upon us again. As I have said many times before, I am the original "Grinch." I hate this time of year, but believe it or not for the first time in history, I have almost all my Christmas shopping completed.

I can't believe it. One of the things I am getting a few relatives is a yearly subscription to The Citizen. It seems that because of my column they have to get it in self-defense to see just exactly what it is I'm writing about them. It really is a great gift for those family members who have had to leave the area but still want to keep in touch with all of us left behind, and no, I didn't get a discount; I have to pay 50 cents just like everybody else.

John Percival, an Andover resident, was injured in a woods accident. He is recuperating at CMMC. A card would be nice.

This year, if all goes well, I will be spending Christmas in Philadelphia, which will be a new thing. I've never been there before and am looking forward to ringing the Liberty Bell and talking to Ben, Franklin that is, and comparing Philly to Boston. I have already received a book about just why Philly is better than Boston, but I really don't believe it, yet. I'll just have to wait and see. I'm also going to take my first ride on Amtrak — hope they have a smoking section.

The word of the week is tim-bale. All you cooks should know this one. See ya.

Hanover

by Clem Worcester
Elections took place in Hanover on Nov. 7, just as it did all across the United States.

There was an 84 percent turnout of voters, with six new registrants during the day. Absentee ballots accounted for 12 percent of the vote. Warden for Hanover elections was Bruce Powell and election clerk was Clem Worcester. Ballot clerks were Joan Everett and Paul Ramsey for the Republicans, Herb Adams and Donna Worcester for the Democrats. Trudy Ames also served as ballot clerk. Voting results in Hanover were generally the same as the rest of the state. The counting of ballots was completed by 10 p.m.

Congratulations are extended to Hanover resident, State Senator Norman K. Ferguson Jr. He was successful in his race for a fourth term in the Senate.

A longtime Hanover resident, Irene Russell, died Tuesday, Nov. 7. Sympathy is extended to Nancy, Judy, and Tom and their families. The funeral was held on Saturday, Nov. 11.

Vivian Barlow, a former resident of Andover, died earlier this year in British Columbia, Canada. She was buried in Hanover Cemetery next to her husband, George, on Nov. 10.

The town lines separating Hanover from Newry and Rumford have undergone revitalization this fall. The lines were re-blazed, trimmed and painted with yellow paint under the direction of Stanley Brown. The Rumford/Hanover line was especially difficult where it crosses Mt. Dimmock because of damage from a forest fire in 1992, the ice storm in 1998 and more recent logging operations. That line was last maintained in 1966, while the Newry/Hanover line was last perambulated in 1986. The Hanover/Newry line is 1,500 rods in length and goes from the mouth of Bear River at Newry Corner to the north side of Mt. Dimmock. The Rumford/Hanover line is 625 rods in length traveling from the northern side of Mt. Dimmock to the Androscoggin River. The 2,000-rod Hanover/Bethel boundary is the Androscoggin River with Hemlock Island and the Roberts Islands being in Hanover.

Jenny Worcester and Matt Tirrell were married Nov. 4 at the Congregational Church in Mechanic Falls, with the Rev. Michael Ring officiating. The organist was Bob Malcom. After the wedding ceremony, a reception took place at the Mechanic Falls American Legion Hall. Following a honeymoon at the Summit Hotel in Newry, Mr. and Mrs. Tirrell are residing at 8 Yates Street, Mechanic Falls.

Franklin Grange 124 met on Monday, Nov. 6, with 15 members and seven guests from the American Legion and Auxiliary. Olive Risko presented a program on Veterans Day; song by all, "You're a Grand Old Flag"; three men from the American Legion folded the American Flag while Olive read what each fold means; each of the Auxiliary members read something about how Armistice Day came about, as Nov. 11 used to be called Armistice Day, but in 1954 it was changed to Veterans Day to honor all veterans; Dot Canwell whistled "How do you Keep them Down on the Farm"; everyone sang "My Buddy"; and the program ended by everyone singing "God Bless America." The next meeting will be a Thanksgiving program on Nov. 20.

'Living in Lovell: 1800-2000'

What did Lovell look like in the old days? What was important? What places and traditions are still vital to Lovell's residents? The Lovell Historical Society and the Charlotte Hobbs Memorial Library have received a New Century Community History Grant from the Maine Humanities Council in support of "Living in Lovell: 1800-2000," a photo, video, and audio exhibit that explores the town's history through the eyes of its current residents. The exhibit will open at the Lovell Heritage Center on Route 5 with a special reception and program, free and open to the public, on Saturday, Nov. 18, from 1 to 5 p.m.

The opening program will include, at 3 p.m., a multi-media presentation of local history and geography projects by Molly Ockett Middle School students. Scheduled to open almost exactly 200 years after the official incorporation of the Town of Lovell (Nov. 15, 1800) the exhibit is based on themes chosen by Lovell's diverse residents — newcomers and descendants of original settlers and American Indians, summer people and year-round residents, men and women, children and parents and grandparents, woods workers and builders and church members, teachers and students, and lawyers.

Historical photographs from the Lovell Historical Society's collection will be set off by statements by contemporary townspeople. Reminiscences by Lovell storytellers on tape and video will bring the past to life. "I guess one of my fondest memories," said Lynn Micklon, the Center Lovell postmaster, "was all of us working outside together as a family when I was raised as a child by my mother and father. ... All of us kids. And I can remember my father used to have an old pickup truck and on the back end of it he had some kind of a saw rigged up to it. And I can remember him backing that truck up to the shed door and my brothers and my father would all work together and they would take big logs and throw them up on this thing and push the saw forward to cut it. ... And then they'd take it off and the next older boy would start chopping it up and another would handle it and throw it in the shed. ... Hard work."

The history of creative homegrown entertainments in Lovell will be an additional feature of the exhibit, illustrated by photos, programs, and film clips. "I do miss the dances," said Ruth Mitchell. "We used to have dances at the grange halls and we were thrown around by the local boys. Contra dancing, the Boston Fancy and Portland something, I don't remember now. That was in my early teens. We used to have a good time up here."

"Living in Lovell: 1800-2000" is supported by donations of services, materials, funds, and much volunteer labor from Aurora and Quanta Productions (Portland), the Lovell Lumber Company, and many citizens of Lovell. The New Century Community Program of the Maine Humanities Council, which has provided the matching grant for the project, is a collaborative initiative of seven state agencies providing matching grants and technical assistance. Funded by the people of Maine, the program seeks to assist Maine communities in preserving their cultural and educational resources.

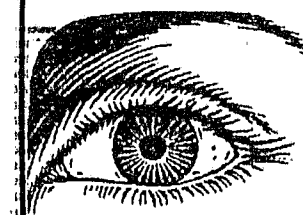

The "Living in Lovell" exhibit will be open Tuesday and Thursday afternoons from 1 to 4 p.m. and Saturday mornings from 9 a.m. to noon from Nov. 21 through Dec. 9 (excluding Thanksgiving Day). Schools or other groups can visit at other times by appointment: call the Historical Society at 925-2792 or the library at 925-3177.

and sisters, nieces and nephews, for a total of 36.

Congratulations to Jolene Lovejoy on her Nov. 7 election. In the Woodstock count of 781 ballots, Jolene won with 419 votes. The Republicans are exceedingly pleased with such a clean record. Jolene expresses thanks to all her supporters — Republicans, Democrats and the non-registered voters.

The Program Committee always has interesting entertainment planned.

The Historical Society is important to our community and area. It helps promote a positive identity for both. When it is so easy to run things down these days, that is crucial. The society preserves our heritage for future generations. This is a vital service indeed.

The Way I See It

by Sharon Bouchard

Sharon Bouchard's column is published here by special arrangement with the Advertising Department of this newspaper.

As some of you may know by now I was recently confined to the hospital for a brief stay. I'm sure there are some of you who probably think the kind of hospital with the padded walls would have been a good idea, but it was nothing like that.

I won't bore everyone with the medical details because it didn't even involve a surgical scar. Even though I was walking the acreage for a few days, I didn't end up buying the farm thanks to a great doctor and some very powerful chemistry. I went to the edge and now I am back.

Staying in a hospital, if you have the good fortune to not be in pain, which I wasn't, can be a very interesting experience. First let me just say that contrary to what a lot of people hear, at Stephens Memorial Hospital I received the very best of care from every one, nurses, C.N.A.s, lab staff and kitchen staff went out of their way to do everything they could for me. I did not have a bad hospital experience and even though the lab took blood at every opportunity and the nurses would do vitals just when I fell asleep, that is all part of their job and I cannot complain even though that is what I do best.

I don't think anyone under 40 should ever have to stay in a hospital. For one thing health problems shouldn't become issues until later in life and for another thing people under 40 still have their modesty. Modesty is not allowed in any medical setting especially a hospital.

The first thing they do when they get you there is take away all your clothes and hand you a threadbare Johnny open in the back — one size fits all. A younger person will spend a considerable amount of time attempting to conceal the backside of their body and get very frustrated with failure of the attempt.

At my age, somewhat over 40, I just don't care. There comes a time in one's life when you figure you might just as well let things hang loose and feel pretty confident that no one really cares to sneak a peek and if they do, well, that's their misfortune.

The next form of humiliation that you're put through that a younger person might have a problem with is that they weigh you and have the nerve to tell you what you weigh — loudly. What's the point of this? You're sick or have something wrong with you or you wouldn't be there so what difference does it make how much you weigh and if you're like me, you really don't want to know.

I found out that it actually does make a difference because the doses of many of the drugs that patients may need are weight based. I can tell you that I had some pretty high doses. And of course if your condition that put you in the hospital has anything to do with wasting away, it needs to be monitored. I can assure you that my condition had nothing to do with wasting away. I kind of wish it had.

Another area that younger people might have a problem with is their hospital roommate. It's not like college where some consideration is made to personalities and hobbies. It's a hospital and where ever there is an empty bed that is where you will go no matter who may be occupying the bed next to you. You can't choose your family and you can't choose your hospital roommate either, simple as that.

You and your roommate might just as well become fast friends because for however long you will be sharing space you are going to be seeing each other at your worst and exchanging bodily sounds usually reserved only for family members.

My roommate, Rosey Roxi (her name had been changed to protect the innocent though I'm not sure how innocent she is) would turn out to be quite the match for me.

I figured she wouldn't be real fond of me to start with considering it was late at night when I was admitted, a very noisy process and the poor woman was trying to sleep. But she took it all in stride.

For the first day we got to know each other only through the curtain that separated our beds. It's a very strange thing to try to make conversation with a total stranger who is sick and you can't even see them! Most of the conversation on the first day consisted of "How you doing?", "How's the food?" and "The telephone is for you."

I was concerned that my frequent visitors and telephone calls would disturb Rosey. Ha! Little did I know that I was rooming with Miss Congeniality of Oxford Hills and in no time at all I would become her social secretary.

Another strange thing about sharing a hospital room is that not only do you get to know all about each other's medical malaises, you get to know each other's company and Rosey had a steady stream of visitors for me to get to know.

I tried not to add my 2 cents worth every time Rosey's family came to visit, but when you are lying half naked 10 feet away, I figured it gave me certain privileges. Plus I liked Rosey's family, they were funny. For that matter, Rosey is funny. She possesses a dry sense of humor and when needed a sharp tongue.

One night a nurse came in to give Rosey a sleeping pill, not an uncommon occurrence in a hospital. The only problem was that Rosey was asleep. Sound asleep. The nurse kept calling her and doing whatever she could to wake Rosey up. I, who can never mind my own business, suggested that since Rosey was truly out like a light, that maybe she didn't need a sleeping pill.

However, if it's on the chart, the nurse has to do what the chart says and waking Rosey up to give her a sleeping pill was on the chart.

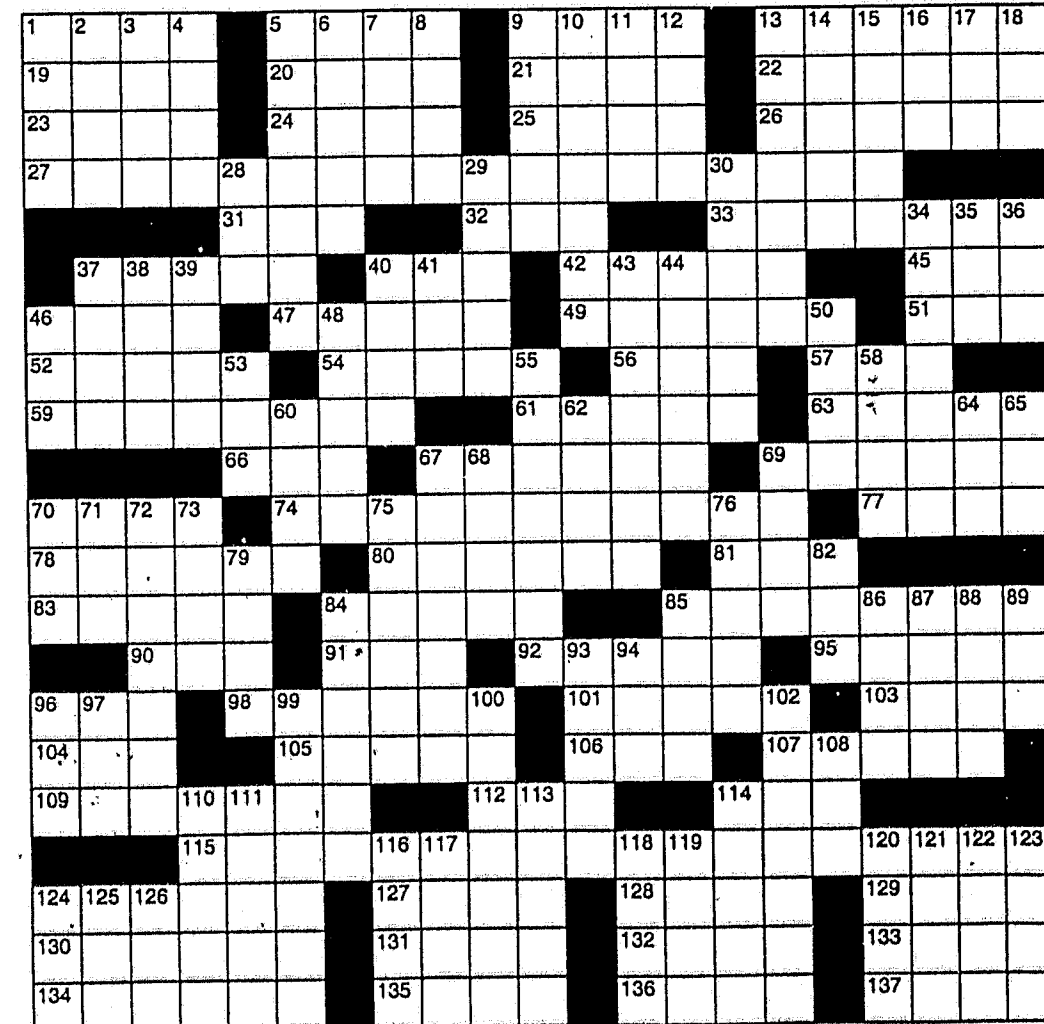

Finally, Rosey stirred from her golden slumber, took her pill and said, "Good, now maybe I'll be able to sleep," and without another word she went right back to sleep. Now, that's funny!

In five days you can grow pretty attached to a person like Rosey even though she could put me in my place when she thought I was necessary. In fact, that was one of the things I liked about her. I also like that she has moxie or spirit or spark or whatever you want to call it. She is Ms. Roxi, the lady with moxie. And did I happen to mention that she's 30 years older than me?

The way I see it, I hope that neither Rosey nor myself end up back in the hospital, but if we do, I certainly hope that we will be in the same room again. And I hope that none of you readers end up in the hospital either and if you do I hope you have a roommate like Rosey and if you don't have that kind of luck, when they come around and ask if you would like something to drink, just tell them you'd like some Moxie.

Upton

by Eleanor LeComte

If all the rain we experienced in the last week were snow, we would still be digging out.

Today, Below Grafton Notch the sun was shining but the clouds began at the mountains and enveloped Upton in dark, rainy weather. The hunters were not happy. You can curse the weather but you can't change it, and curse they did.

A special Town Meeting was held on Nov. 9. Earl Largesse was elected selectman to fill the seat vacated by Raymond Bernier. Money was transferred from surplus to cover the overdrafts in three accounts. It was a short meeting and those attending lingered long after the meeting in the warm, cozy hall of the Ladies Aid Building socializing over coffee. It doesn't sound like an Upton Town Meeting to me.

The Ladies Aid met on Wednesday and plans for the annual Christmas Party were discussed.

Earl Largesse, road commissioner, and Roger Lavallee have been replacing defective culverts in preparation for winter road maintenance.

Several books have been donated to the Upton Library. Sue Angvine, librarian, reports that "Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone" was donated by the Knight-Anastasi Family. Heather Gramian novels were donated in memory of family members by Carrie Angvine Holt. Several paperbacks were donated by Carrie Holt, Kristy Aguilar and an anonymous donor. We thank them for their gifts and remind you that the library may be opened on request. Whatever your reading interest is there are many varieties of books for winter reading available.

Last week I mentioned that the election hoopla was over. Wrong.

As Yogi Berra once said, "It won't be over till it's over." Don't you wish you paid closer attention in Civics class. In my opinion the Electoral College belongs in the same category as "Buckled Shoes" and "Powdered Wigs" for men. In the year 2000 we sure need a more efficient system.

Although there were a few flags flying, Veterans Day more or less went unnoticed except as a three-day weekend in hunting season. Armistice Day was a very important holiday when I was young, but that was many years ago. Veterans deserve our honor and respect for the service they gave to our country.

Although many "Snow Birds" have headed south, these "old birds" did not make "Bird of the Week." We will watch for their return in the spring. We will miss them while they are gone.

For many years in the fall, we were visited by a Rufus-sided Towhee. A scuffling and scraping sound in the dry leaves alerted you as to their presence. It sounds like a squirrel burying nuts in the leaves. They are solitary birds. I have never seen two of them together. Towhees are about the size of a small robin, and on quick observation you might think it is a robin. The male has a black head and throat, reddish brown sides with a white breast. Its long, black tail feathers are tipped with white. The female has an attractive brown head, throat and back. The young are brown with dark streaked under parts. Cowbirds victimize these birds with great success. They may lay up to eight eggs in a towhee nest. The juveniles do not remain with their family long and disperse on their own as soon as they are able. Cats have little trouble snagging these birds as they scatter leaves looking for insects and grubs. The "Bird of the Week" is the Rufus-sided Towhee. The next time you are taking a walk in the woods listen for that telltale sound of scuffling leaves. You may be fortunate enough to see one.

Locke Mills

Sunday, I received a surprise visit from my cousin, Frank Flint and his wife, Suzie, who came up from Duluth, Ga. to see his mother, Leona Flint, at Ledgeview. They said they wanted to get a visit in before the winter season sets in. They are really enjoying Georgia and especially grandchild, Christopher and Erica Dore. Erica is eight and enjoys ballet. Christopher is nearly three and enjoys just being a boy at this point. Anyhow, we had a nice visit.

We told them how we'd been to the William Bingham house, which evoked a lot of memories for Frank, who was a good friend of Ned Hastings, and even Suzie, who remembers her first impressions of people living in Bethel during the era of William Bingham, Fred Edwards and the Hastings of Broad Street. So after they left here they went to Bethel to see what is being done to the Marsh Hastings' house and get a look at the new face of the Edwards' farmhouse where Frank used to live and is now owned by John and Fumi Head.

I've been interested in the work being done on the garage next to my old home on Main Street. I remember when it was a rather swampy place that bred a constant supply of mosquitoes during the spring and summer. I think I felt it was an improvement when the garage was built. What we didn't care for was the blinking neon sign and at some point it was changed to one that was lighted but did not blink, a nice improvement.

Ken Wakefield improves daily as he is able to walk a little more each day. He was getting a new brace on Thursday, which is supposed to fit better now he has lost so much weight. He told me his brother-in-law, Harry Swan Jr., is in Stephens Memorial Hospital and expects to be there about a week. Harry and his wife, Margery, lived here for many years and still have many friends here. His room, by the way, is 225.

Unfortunately, I had to have my Tizzy laid away Saturday. She had developed a bladder infection and her mouth was showing signs of the cancer spreading, so I didn't feel I could put her through any more pain. I certainly miss her, with her big round eyes, which always looked reproachful as if she were faintly accusing one of not spending more time holding her. She was also very vocal about her likes and dislikes and she especially disliked being put out of a lap. Even cat lovers who held her for the first time (and she was one who always wanted to be held by anyone who came in, stranger or not, unlike most cats) were rather startled when she would growl as they were putting her down on the floor when they were getting ready to leave. All my cats have had their own distinct personalities and hers was one of the more distinctive. She wouldn't let it be otherwise.

I can't believe that last week I confidently said that by now the election would be all over. I have lived long enough so I should know that any time the media and/or politicians are involved anything can happen and often does. Unfortunately, no matter who finally wins this thing, nearly half of our population is going to be upset and disappointed.

My daughter said she has never been so worried or nervous about the outcome of an election as she was this one. The candidates have very different ideas about some things, which is not always the case. I think she probably does feel a bit better now the assisted suicide referendum has been defeated. She feels, as I do, that it takes doctors out of the healing realm and puts them in a position that they may not want to be in. Also, we are sending a message to our young people that it is all right to commit suicide in some instances, which sort of opens the door as to who decides what "instances." I also have a problem with other people being involved intentionally in a suicide. It is too close to being an accessory to murder as far as I'm concerned. I know no one has asked me but since nowadays it seems politically correct to broadcast one's opinion, ad nauseam, anywhere and everywhere, I might as well join the crowd.

I was surprised that the equal rights referendum didn't pass this time and even more surprised that the mentally challenged didn't. Any person who is interested in casting a vote probably is perfectly capable of doing so, mentally challenged or not. People often don't realize that mentally ill does not necessarily mean stupid. In fact, they are often extremely bright. They just have difficulty coping with everyday living. The people who are completely out of touch make up less than 1 percent of those who are mentally ill and they could care less about voting.

Congratulations to Jon and Diana (Poland) Dunn on the birth of a son, Jarod Howard, born Nov. 7 at Stephens Memorial Hospital. He weighed 8 pounds, 13 ounces. Maternal grandparents are Todd and Lynda Poland and Terry Angvine. Maternal great-grandparents are Phelps and Joan Poland and Frank and Christine Campbell. Maternal great-great-grandmother is Elizabeth Knights. Jarod joins a brother, Brandon, at their home in Poland.

I voted, that's all I can say about the whole mess. Hopefully, it'll be resolved soon. I think maybe some changes need to be made in future elections so there isn't as much indecision.

Sunday River Valley

by Rockie Graham

It is an early morning in mid-November and yet it is 40 degrees above zero. My house is warm and I type without gloves on. I do not complain. I just wonder at the weather. Meanwhile, rain is in the forecast. Rain and not snow. It is not the warmest November day I remember, and yet, it is the longest fall warm spell I recall. I have time to do all those autumn chores I haven't had time for. I am glad.

Last Saturday, the Valleys met at the Newry Grange. Sunday River was definitely outclassed. Or is it that we were playing against a team of Bear River residents that have been in their valley far longer than we have been in ours? In any case, Bear River beat the pants off us, and I am off to the town office to buy those books about Newry. I tried election night and Sylvia said she had to run. It was my only chance. Still, I am not sure I could have equaled Owen's memory of Bill's or ... The truth is they knew this stuff and I would have been learning it for the first time. I will study for the next contest. We will get that cup.

Last night I had the privilege to go to the annual meeting of the Maine Rural Workers Coalition. It took more time than most meetings, because everything was translated between Spanish and English.

MEMBERS OF THE BETHEL HOSE COMPANY (predecessor of the present Bethel Fire Department) pause on Mechanic Street toward the end of the 19th century, possibly at the time of the Bethel Centennial in 1896. This photograph is one of thousands that can be found at the Bethel Historical Society, which also possesses an outstanding collection of manuscripts, books, documents, and artifacts relating to western Maine and northern New Hampshire. The society is currently raising funds to establish its Regional History Center and to renovate the 1821 O'Neil Robinson House on Broad Street, which now houses exhibit galleries, offices, and the museum shop. Completion of this project will provide for improved storage space and greater access to collections as well as rooms devoted to educational activities, genealogical and historical research, and traditional crafts. Once the center is fully operational it will offer an expanded series of lectures, special events, conferences, courses, seminars, and publications. To learn more about this project, call the society at 824-2908 or (800) 824-2910 or use the e-mail address history@bdc.bethel.me.us or visit the Web site <http://orion.bdc.bethel.me.us/~history>.

Tuesday (21st) is a day I always look forward to: Turkey Tuesday. It is the day David and Heather of Good Food store hold a Thanksgiving celebration for those that have to work on Thanksgiving. At least that is how it started. The price of admission is a canned good and a dish to share. What started small has now grown to need the Locke Mills Legion Hall. Last year, a mountain of food was collected and a good time was had by all ages. This year I expect the same.

I also hope all who can celebrate next Thursday will have a very happy Thanksgiving. It brings back great memories for me. Mostly I remember waiting as long as I could to get dressed — I hated those dresses they made me wear — and watching the Macy's Parade on television. I loved those big floats and could not imagine how they could be balloons. Perhaps I will be able to watch it here. I don't know if I ever have. It is a part of my childhood.

From the Bethel Historical Society's Regional History Center

Over $11,500 has been received to date for the Bethel Historical Society's 2000 Annual Fund. Among the most recent donors are: Earlon and Mary Keniston, Bethel; Olive Risko, Bryant Pond; Richard and Sally Taylor, Bethel; Randall H. Bennett, Bethel, in memory of Lester L. Bennett and Sandra F. Mason; Robert and Pauline Davis, Bethel, in memory of Barbara D. Brown; Alden and Mabel Kennett, Bethel; Robert J. McCrea, Meriden, Conn., in memory of Mary McCrea; Mansfield Packard, South Paris; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Smith, Petaluma, Calif.; Elizabeth A. Kilgore, Interlachen, Fla., in memory of the Kilgore Family; Ida Lee Bryant, Bangor, in memory of George Bryant; Laurel Blossom, New York, N.Y., in memory of William Bingham II; Mr. and Mrs. Roland Crocker, Riverside, R.I., in memory of Wallace and Lilas Coolidge; Mary Ann Ashcraft, Westminster, Md.; Marian P. Gates, Ann Arbor, Mich., in memory of F. H. Penley; Herbert H. Morton III, Andover, Mass. There are now 270 donors to this year's campaign. Much appreciation is expressed to all of the above for their generosity.

The Barbara D. Brown Fund has now surpassed the $2,500 level with over 60 donors. This is expected to become a permanent fund of the society where only the income will be used to provide funds for plantings relating to the Robinson House.

The Bethel Historical Society museum shop is open weekdays Tuesday through Friday, 1 to 4 p.m. After Thanksgiving, the shop will also be open on Saturday and Sunday, 1 to 4 p.m. until Christmas. Much new stock has been added this fall so anyone interested in historical books, all kinds of nostalgia items and unique gift ideas should stop by.

From the Finnish Amer. Heritage Society

An exchange teacher from Finland will be the program speaker at the Sunday, Nov. 19, meeting of the Finnish-American Heritage Society of Maine.

Mari Toistinen of Kuopio, Finland has exchanged positions with Marcia Thorstenson of Wayne to teach music and voice in the Jay school system. Toistinen will speak of her experiences and curriculum differences.

The meeting will start at 2 p.m. at the Finnish-American Heritage Center on Maple Street, West Paris.

Interested persons are invited to attend. For information on the society, call 583-2877.

From the Bethel Senior Citizens

The Bethel Senior Citizens Club met Nov. 8 at the Locke Mills Legion Hall for their monthly meeting and dinner with 64 members present.

President Helen Saunders led the salute to the flag and conducted the meeting. Reports were given by Jane Hosterman, Rudy Royer, Tillie Meyers and Arlene Lowell.

The next meeting will be the Christmas party at the Bethel Inn on Dec. 13 at 6:30 p.m.. The price of dinner is $7. Ladies will bring a gift for a lady and the men will bring a gift for a man.

The door prize was won by Roger Twitchell and the raffle.

Senior Citizens

which was a Christmas wreath donated by Arlene Lowell, was won by Wilma Gorman.

Music was furnished by Jewel Clark. Camilla Everett, Jaye Hosterman and Cheryl Thibodau each gave a humorous reading.

The club voted to donate $50 to Nina Wheeler for Kids for Christmas.

Nov. 19 is the Senior Citizen Thanksgiving dinner at Telstar High School.

December 12 is the Rotary Christmas party at the Locke Mills Legion Hall.

Ginny Walker presented the following slate of officers for the coming year: president, Ginny Walker; first vice president, Cecile Lescault; second vice president, Musa Brown; secretary, Arlene Lowell; assistant secretary, Lois Leavitt; treasurer, Jane Hosterman; assistant treasurer, Barbara Mahler; finance, Bud Paine; fundraisers, JoAnn and Rudy Royer; sunshine, Helen Saunders and Arlene Lowell; programs and trips, Helen Saunders; membership, Arlene Lowell and chaplain, Rudy Royer. The slate of officers was approved by the members.

November birthdays are: Ernest Angevine, Lawrence Bailey, Kathleen Bean, Annie Crockett, Robert Davis, Betty Robertson, Maurice Lescault, Henreitta Taft and Ruth Wiles. The birthday cake was furnished by Tillie Meyers.

From the

Cole Block Renovation Committee

A public meeting, hosted by the Cole Block Renovation Committee, will be held on Tuesday, Nov. 28, at 7 p.m. at Telstar Regional High School ITV room to discuss the Odeon Hall renovation project. The Cole Block Renovation Committee has been chartered by the town of Bethel to provide planning support for the Cole Block, which includes Odeon Hall on the second floor. The committee is an offshoot of the Friends of Odeon Hall and consists of Al and Jackie Cressy, Robin Mills, Judy Brown, Ginny Walker and Vicki Rackliffe.

The agenda for the public meeting will include an update on the renovation project with presentations by architects Jim Reuter and Noel Smith and consultant John Cleveland.

In early October, the firm of Smith/Reuter was hired by the town of Bethel to assess the extent of renovations necessary to Odeon Hall to address life safety and accessibility issues. Voters at the annual Town Meeting in June appropriated $5,000 to be used to fund this architectural study. They will present their findings regarding the proposed renovation project, an accessibility concept, and cost estimates associated with its implementation.

John Cleveland of Community Dynamics Corp., Auburn, will discuss a proposed Community Development Block Grant application with which Odeon Hall will be made accessible to people with disabilities. Mr. Cleveland's work is being funded by a grant for a feasibility study of the project awarded to the Mahosue Arts Council from the Maine Arts Commission. The public's input about this exciting project is welcome and folks are urged to attend.

Author to discuss history of gays in early 20th century Maine summer colony

Vance Muse, author of "We Were Here," a history of a gay summer compound on the coast of Maine in the early 1900s, will read and show slides from the forthcoming book.

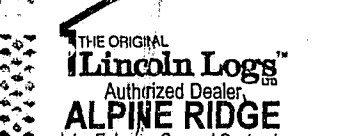

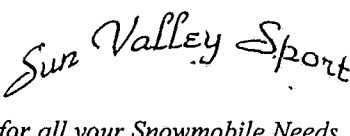

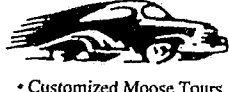

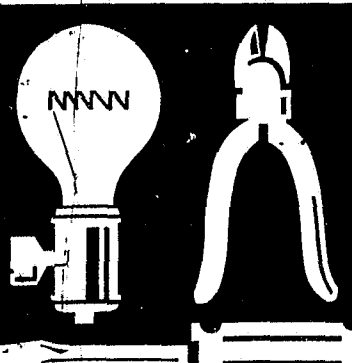

Muse's book, to be published by Random House, was inspired by a fortunate find at a Maine secondhand shop — a set of mysterious photography albums dated 1908-1911. They picture a group of friends on summer holiday, an "extended family" of gay and straight people. "You could instantly see that the affectionate pairings were inclusive," says Muse. "You see men and women, men and men, and women and women." The albums contained no names or addresses, but taking subtle clues from the snapshots (made with a Kodak Brownie nearly 100 years ago), Muse has identified most of the long-deceased people in the pictures and researched their stories.

In his presentation for Maine Speak Out Project, Muse, who writes for several national publications and is director of communications for an arts foundation in Houston, Texas, will tell the story of his detective work, which has led him up to Philadelphia and up and down the Maine coast.

Following Muse's talk, and to tie the historic record to present, two volunteers from the Oxford County chapter of Maine Speak Out Project will relate their experiences as gay/lesbian people in present day Maine.

This event will take place at the Alder River Grange, Bethel, on Sunday, Nov. 19 from 2 to 3:30 p.m. and it is free to the public. For more information, contact David Aaron Swander at Maine Speak Out Project: (866) 879-6767 or 879-0480.

HE SEARCHES HIGH AND LOW

Meet Jonathan Van Fleet, reporter for the Sun Journal. He can be found anywhere from the top of Mt. Katahdin to the basement of the Lewiston City Building in search of news. Jon is proud of his outdoor, sometimes offbeat stories, like interviewing the weatherman on the top of Mt. Washington. But he thinks the most important stories are those that help keep citizens informed. Staying on top of a City Council issue or a mountain, Jon gives our readers the facts.

Mr. & Mrs. Brian LeFort

The wedding of Kara Leah LaBarbera, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Salvatore LaBarbera of Newry, and Brian Keith LeFort, son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry LeFort of Bath, was held at 3 p.m. on Sept. 30, 2000 at the Kingdom Hall of Jehovah's Witnesses in Lewiston.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white satin and lace gown with a cascade of red and white roses.

Lynn Michaud of Fort Kent was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Shellah Baiei and Sharon Baiei, both of Auburn and Crystal Card of Topsham.

Nathan LeFort, brother of the groom, was best man and the groomsmen were Chip LeFort, Jason LeFort, brothers of the groom, and Rob LaBarbera, brother of the bride.

A reception followed in Bath after which the couple spent a week in Bar Harbor. They are now residing in Calais.

Thank You

I would like to thank my family and friends for their support with cards, calls, flowers, food and for making me feel very blessed. Your thoughtfulness was very much appreciated.

My love to all of you.
